Neem Oil

The main constituents of Neem Oil are long chain fatty acids and tryglicerides, but the most important active principle of the neem tree is AZADIRACHTIN. This active principle, similar to insect hormones, leaves a peculiar odour particularly unpleasant for parasites. It also inhibits their growth at a larval stage largely contributing to their death. In its different clinical experiences, Neem Oil proved its efficacy, similar or even higher than Permethrin, with the advantage of not inducing the outbreak of harder forms. The efficacy of the product is completed by the action of essential oils, namely:

Lavender

Peppermint

Thyme

Tea tree oil

Oregano

Geranium

Litsea Cubeba
